OK. I still prefer what we agreed to in the meeting, but it is what it is.

I apologize, but the list I sent out corresponds well with what is in my notes and with both Rick Raymondi and Mike McVay recollections. As I recall from the committee discussion, committee members were to select their favorite items and IDWR was going to pursue everything on the prioritized list. If something on the list proved to be too resource intensive to finish in a timely fashion, then it would not be included in ESPAM2.2 but would be included in a later version of the model.

My instructions to you are to select your favorite 10 items, IDWR will then compile the results from all respondents, display the results at the next meeting, and begin perusing everything on the list. We will keep the ESHMC apprised of our progress. Perhaps some of the things on the list will have to be delayed for a later version of the model.

Subject: Re: ESPAM2.2 prioritizing updates

Before I go to the effort to go through this spreadsheet, what is the possibility of doing what we talked about in ESHMC meeting? As I recall, this was that you would present us with three unique lists. One would be a list of things that IDWR has already done or committed to do. The second list would be a list of candidates for ESPAM2.2; i.e. things that are easy enough to do that we could accomplish them within the effort and time allotted. The third would be a list of things that are candidates for ESPAM-beyond-2.2, because they are too costly or difficult to responsibly attempt right now.

My understanding is that we would not rank the first list, as the decisions have already been made. I also understood that we would independently rank the second and third lists.

It is true that the list you presented does sort of do the parsing, but it does not allow for the independent ranking. It is the independent ranking that gave the agreed-upon proposal its power.

The list we have now retains ambiguity brought on by thought processes like "I think multiple layers in selected areas is a good idea, but I think it is foolhardy to attempt it with ESPAM2.2. Do I vote for it or not?"

Hi

The attached file contains the list of potential improvements we discussed last meeting. You may vote on any ten (10), with one (1) being your highest priority.
