OF THE STATE OF IDAHO

IN THE MATTER OF THE PROPOSED
EXPANSION OF THE EASTERN SNAKE PLAIN
AQUIFER AREA OF COMMON GROUND
WATER SUPPLY TO INCLUDE THE BIG LOST
RIVER TRIBUTARY BASIN

ORDER EXPANDING THE EASTERN SNAKE PLAIN
AQUIFER AREA OF COMMON GROUND WATER SUPPLY TO INCLUDE THE BIG LOST RIVER
TRIBUTARY BASIN

BACKGROUND

In 2024, the Idaho Legislature passed, and the Governor signed into law, Idaho Code § 42-233c, which authorizes the Director (“Director”) of the Idaho Department of Water Resources to expand the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer (“ESPA”) Area of Common Ground Water Supply (“ACGWS”) to “include tributary basins that affect the [ESPA].” I.C. § 42-233c(2). As described below, the Director concludes the ESPA ACGWS should be expanded to include the entirety of the Big Lost River tributary Basin because it is connected to and affects the ESPA.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The hydrologic connectivity of the ESPA and its tributary basins has been extensively studied and is well documented. Most water available to the Snake River Plain originates as surface water inflow or ground water underflow from tributary basins. Amended Snake River Basin Moratorium Order (July 16, 2024) at 9. Streamflow originating in tributary basins recharges the ESPA through a combination of infiltration of water from streams with losing reaches and incidental recharge from the diversion of surface water onto the Eastern Snake River Plain. Id. Consumptive use in the tributary basins reduces the water supply available to senior surface water users reliant on the Snake River and springs emerging from the ESPA. Id.

2. In 1991, an Idaho Water Resources Research Institute study estimated average annual ground water diversions in the Big Lost River Basin to be 47,000 AF/yr. This study also estimated peak annual ground water diversions of 69,400 AF in 1989.<sup>1</sup>

3. Ground water diversions reported by Water District 34 for 2014 through 2023 indicate that the volume of ground water pumping in the Big Lost River Basin continued to increase after 1990. Reported annual ground water diversions ranged from 50,000 AF in 2017 to 115,000 AF in 2021, averaging approximately 81,000 AF/yr.<sup>2</sup>

4. Because many of the ground water rights in the Big Lost River valley are supplemental to surface water rights, less ground water is diverted for irrigation in years with higher surface water supply. Crop irrigation demand, which varies with climate, crop type, and crop management, also affects the volume of ground water diverted.<sup>3</sup>

5. The Big Lost River Basin has long been recognized as an important source of recharge to the ESPA, providing recharge through both ground water underflow and streamflow seepage from losing reaches of the Big Lost River.<sup>4</sup>

6. Basins tributary to the ESPA, including the entire Big Lost River Basin, were included in the Amended Snake River Basin Moratorium Order because of the recognition that consumptive use of water in the tributary basins reduces recharge to the ESPA and reduces the water supply available for senior water right holders. Amended Snake River Basin Moratorium Order (July 16, 2024) at 9-11, 27-28.

7. The Big Lost River extends approximately 60 miles through the Big Lost River valley from the confluence of the East Fork and North Fork to the mouth of the valley. The river interacts with ground water, gaining water from and losing water to the Big Lost River valley aquifer system at various locations between the confluence and the mouth of the valley. Downstream of Arco, the Big Lost River enters the Eastern Snake River Plain (“ESRP”) and is an intermittent losing stream perched above the ESPA. The river channel ends east-northeast of Arco in a depression known locally as the “Lost River sinks.”<sup>5</sup> Between 1944 and 1968, the average annual streamflow from the Big Lost River to the ESRP was 54,000 AF/yr.<sup>6</sup> Between 2000 and 2019, the average annual streamflow leaving the basin at the Big Lost River near Arco gage was 17,000 AF/yr.<sup>7</sup>

8. A recent basin characterization by the U.S. Geological Survey included development of a three-dimensional hydrogeologic framework describing the spatial distribution of hydrogeologic units based on lithology data from 608 wells. The framework provides insights into hydrogeologic controls on water movement and observed interactions between ground water and surface water. Losing reaches of the Big Lost River in the Chilly and Darlington Sinks are associated with valley widening and coarse unconsolidated sediment subunits (sand and gravel). Gaining reaches of the Big Lost River are associated with valley narrowing (above and below the Mackay Reservoir, above the Moore Diversion and near Arco), recharge from surface water and irrigation (above the Moore Diversion and near Arco), and confining layers (near Arco) in the Quaternary unconsolidated sediments hydrogeologic unit.<sup>8</sup>

9. Quaternary-age unconsolidated basin-fill sediments constitute the principal hydrogeologic unit in the valley and are the main source of ground water in the Big Lost River Basin. Quaternary-age basalt underlies and is interbedded with the sediments in the southern end of the valley, where the basalt units comprise several significant water-bearing zones.<sup>9</sup>

10. Multiple water-bearing zones have been identified in the interbedded sediments and basalt at the southern end of the valley.<sup>10</sup> These water-bearing zones become thinner in a southerly direction from the mouth of the valley and “finally disappear as the water percolates downward to the regional water table underlying the Snake River Plain.”<sup>11</sup>

11. Local hydrogeologic studies conducted at the Idaho National Laboratory include construction of a ground water-flow model which identifies both ground water underflow from the Big Lost River valley and infiltration of streamflow from the Big Lost River as important components of recharge to the ESPA.<sup>12</sup> Local hydrogeologic studies conducted at the Idaho National Laboratory also include geochemical characterization of sources of recharge to the ESPA. The geochemical analyses also indicate ground water underflow from the Big Lost River valley and infiltration of streamflow from the Big Lost River are important components of recharge to the ESPA.<sup>13</sup>

12. Water that is not consumed in the Big Lost River Basin leaves the basin as ground water underflow to the ESPA or Big Lost River streamflow to the ESRP. Consumptive use of ground water in the Big Lost River Basin reduces underflow to the ESPA and streamflow seepage to the ESPA downstream of Arco. The net depletion of ground water underflow and streamflow from the Big Lost River Basin is equivalent to the evapotranspiration of crops supplied by ground water irrigation plus water evaporated from delivery ditches.<sup>14</sup>

13. Ground water levels in the Big Lost River valley have declined following increased ground water use. Regional Kendall analyses of water-level data collected from 26 wells below Mackay Dam indicate there was a statistically significant trend of increasing water levels of 0.09 feet per year between 1950 and 1977, and a statistically significant trend of decreasing water levels of 0.27 feet per year between 1977 and 2023. Regional analyses of water-level data from 16 wells above Mackay Dam resulted in a statistically significant trend of increasing water levels of 0.14 feet per year between 1967 and 1977 and a statistically significant trend of decreasing water levels of 0.10 feet per year between 1977 and 2023.<sup>15</sup>

14. Prior to the 1980s, aquifer water levels in the Big Lost River valley declined during drought periods but recovered fully during wet periods. Beginning in the 1980s, water levels have declined more dramatically during drought periods and have not fully recovered during wet periods. The change in response to climatic conditions results primarily from the use of ground water to sustain crop consumptive use during drought periods. Prior to widespread use of ground water, irrigation consumptive use would have been significantly lower than average during drought periods. Recent diversion data indicate ground water diversions constitute 60% to 75% of total diversions below Mackay Dam during years with low surface water supply. Because surface water diversions typically have higher delivery losses than ground water diversions, the contribution of ground water to the crop irrigation requirement during dry years would have been an even higher percentage.<sup>16</sup>

15. Regional water level declines over several decades demonstrate that long-term aquifer discharge in the Big Lost River valley has exceeded long-term aquifer recharge. Aquifer recharge during wet years has not been sufficient for water levels to recover fully from the use of ground water to maintain crop consumptive use during dry years. In recent decades, there have been large fluctuations in aquifer storage and aquifer interaction with the Big Lost River. While water levels recover to some extent in response to years with higher surface water supply, periods of recovery have repeatedly been short-lived and followed by substantial decreases in water levels.<sup>17</sup>

16. In 1994, an area of common ground water supply for the ESPA was defined in Rule 50 of the Rules for Conjunctive Management of Surface and Ground Water Resources (“CM Rules”). The area was delineated based on the boundary of a numerical model of the ESPA published by the USGS in 1992.<sup>18</sup> Tributary ground water underflow from areas outside the model boundary was represented as specified inflow at 27 locations along the model boundary, including ground water underflow from the Big Lost River valley.<sup>19</sup> Seepage of Big Lost River streamflow within the USGS model boundary was also represented as specified inflow.<sup>20</sup>

17. Consumptive use of ground water in the Big Lost River valley reduces Big Lost River streamflow to the ESRP and the quantity of ground water underflow to the ESPA,<sup>21</sup> but was largely excluded from the area of common ground water supply defined by CM Rule 50 in 1994.

18. In 2024, the area of common ground water supply for the ESPA was revised by the Idaho Legislature to coincide with the boundary of a numerical model of the ESPA published by IDWR in 2021.<sup>22</sup> This legislative action moved the area of common ground supply boundary from the mouth of the Big Lost River valley northward to the vicinity of Mackay Dam. The IDWR model represents tributary ground water underflow from areas outside the model boundary as a specified inflow at 25 locations, including ground water underflow from the Big Lost River valley north of Mackay Dam and from the Antelope Creek valley.<sup>23</sup> Ground water recharge resulting from seepage of Big Lost River streamflow between Mackay Dam and the Big Lost River sinks was represented as a specified inflow in the IDWR model.<sup>24</sup> Ground water recharge resulting from canal seepage and on-farm infiltration of surface water diversion for irrigation south of Mackay Dam was also represented as a specified inflow in the IDWR model.<sup>25</sup>

19. Consumptive use of ground water within the Big Lost River Basin but outside of the current area of common ground water supply reduces ground water underflow into the lower Big Lost River valley, resulting in a reduction in ground water underflow to the ESPA.<sup>26</sup> Consumptive use of ground water within the Big Lost River Basin but outside of the current area of common ground water supply also reduces ground water inflow to the Big Lost River and tributary streams that provide inflow to Mackay Reservoir,<sup>27</sup> resulting in a reduction in Big Lost River streamflow available to recharge the ESPA through seepage losses, canal seepage, and on-farm infiltration.<sup>28</sup>

20. Recorded pumping data for 2020 through 2024 extracted from IDWR's Water Measurement Information System database on March 19, 2025, indicate ground water diversions outside of the current area of common ground water supply ranged from 3,600 to 5,500 AF/yr. This is consistent with a previous review of Water District 34 watermaster reports indicating that ground water diversions above Mackay Dam ranged from 3,000 to 5,500 AF/yr between 2014 and 2023.<sup>29</sup>

21. Approximately 95% of ground water use in the Big Lost River Basin occurs in the valley south of Mackay Dam.<sup>30</sup> This area has already been added to the ESPA area of common ground water supply by the Idaho Legislature and is not affected by this order. Reported ground water diversions below Mackay Dam ranged from 50,000 to 115,000 AF/yr between 2014 and 2023, averaging 81,000 AF/yr.<sup>31</sup>

22. The Big Lost River Basin outside of the current area of common ground water supply is tributary to the portion of the Big Lost River Basin located within the current area of common ground water supply. Streamflow in the Big Lost River below Mackay Dam originates in the area outside of the current area of common ground water supply. Seepage from the Big Lost River and seepage of irrigation water diverted from the Big Lost River are significant sources of recharge to the Big Lost River valley aquifer system below Mackay Dam.<sup>32</sup> Ground water underflow to the Big Lost River valley aquifer system below Mackay Dam has been identified as a source of recharge in the vicinity of Mackay Dam, in the Antelope and Alder Creek valleys, and along the Lost River Range mountain front.<sup>33</sup>

ANALYSIS

Idaho Code § 42-233c(2) authorizes the Director to expand the ESPA ACGWS to include tributary basins that affect the ESPA. To enter an order expanding the ESPA ACGWS, the director must provide notice to the owner of each water right proposed to be administered in the tributary basin. I.C. § 42-233c(3). The notice shall describe the action to be taken, the reasons therefore, and the time and place of a hearing to be held concerning the proposed action. I.C. § 42-233c(3). Only after the hearing has taken place may the Director enter an order expanding the ESPA ACGWS. I.C. § 42-233c(4). If the tributary basin affecting the ESPA has been designated as a critical ground water area or a ground water management area and has an approved ground water management plan, in addition to the notice and hearing requirements, the Director must determine the existing ground water management plan is insufficient to manage the effects of ground water withdrawals on the aquifer before expanding the ESPA ACGWS to include the tributary basin. I.C. § 42-233c(2).

The Big Lost River Basin has not been designated as a critical ground water area or ground water management area. On March 7, 2025, the Director provided a notice of public hearing via U.S. mail to all owners of non-exempt ground water rights on record with the Department that have an authorized point of diversion within the proposed administrative area of the Big Lost River Basin.<sup>35</sup> On March 24, 2025, the Director held a hearing concerning the proposed expansion of the ESPA ACGWS at Valley Community Center, 3353 3155 North, Moore, Idaho, 83255. Oral public comment was allowed and recorded during the hearing, and written public comment was open for submission until April 7, 2025. The Big Lost River Basin is a tributary to, and hydraulically connected with, the ESPA. Past and current hydrogeologic investigations and groundwater models consistently establish that groundwater and surface water seepage within the Big Lost River Basin contribute recharge and underflow to the ESPA.

Groundwater diversions in the basin have increased steadily since the mid-twentieth century, and since the 1980s, groundwater pumping has produced sustained declines in groundwater levels.

Due to this long history of increasing groundwater development and declining aquifer conditions, the Big Lost River Basin has been subject to prior administrative controls, including <sup>34</sup> Sukow, J., 2026, Snake River response to groundwater underflow from the Big Lost tributary basin outside the current Area of Common Ground Water Supply, Idaho Department of Water Resources memorandum, January 8, 2026, p. 5-6.

<sup>35</sup> The Notice of Proposed Action, Public Hearing and Written Comment Period dated March 7, 2025, stated the notice would be sent to all current owners of exempt and non-exempt ground water rights that have an authorized point of diversion within the proposed Big Lost River tributary Basin. This statement was incorrect. Idaho Code § 42-233c only requires notice be sent to “the owner of each water right proposed to be administered in the tributary basin.” I.C. § 42-233c(3). Since the Department will not be administering the exempt ground water rights, the Department only provided notice to holders of non-exempt ground water rights.

the inclusion of the basin in a moratorium area and partial inclusion of the basin within the ESPA ACGWS.

The remainder of the Big Lost River Basin is hydraulically connected to, and directly affects, the portion of the basin already within the ACGWS.

While pumping within the Big Lost River Basin may not capture individual water particles that would have directly flown to the near Blackfoot to Minidoka reach of the Snake River, the pumping captures water that would have become part of the interconnected ESPA system, reducing aquifer head and the hydraulic gradient between the ESPA and the Snake River.

As a result, consumptive groundwater use outside the current ESPA ACGWS boundary reduces groundwater underflow to the lower Big Lost River Valley and, in turn, diminishes groundwater underflow to the ESPA. In addition, upstream groundwater pumping reduces Big Lost River streamflow available for recharge to the ESPA through river seepage, canal losses, and on-farm infiltration. Changes in groundwater levels and aquifer storage anywhere within the Big Lost River Basin therefore directly affect the volume of water contributing to the ESPA: increased storage enhances underflow and recharge, while declining storage reduces it.

Reductions in ESPA aquifer storage result in depletions to the Snake River, including the Near Blackfoot-to-Minidoka Reach from which the Surface Water Coalition diverts. Declining groundwater conditions in tributary basins such as the Big Lost River Basin contribute to these depletions and affect the availability of water to senior surface water rights. The portion of the Big Lost River Basin outside the current ACGWS lacks a groundwater management plan capable of ensuring sustainable use or mitigating injury to hydraulically connected rights.

Under Idaho's Conjunctive Management Rules, the ACGWS defines the sources of groundwater that must be jointly administered to prevent material injury to senior surface water users. Because groundwater development in the portion of the Big Lost River Basin outside the current administrative boundary affects groundwater conditions within the included portion of the basin, reduces contributions to the ESPA, and contributes to depletions in the reach of the Snake River subject to the Surface Water Coalition Delivery Call, the ACGWS should be expanded to include the remainder of the Big Lost River Basin.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The notice and hearing requirements of Idaho Code § 42-233c(3) were met.
2. Because the Big Lost River tributary Basin affects the ESPA, and based on the foregoing findings of fact, the ESPA ACGWS should be expanded to include the Big Lost River tributary Basin pursuant to Idaho Code § 42-233c(2).

ORDER

IT IS ORDERED that the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer Area of Common Ground Water Supply be expanded to include the Big Lost River tributary Basin as depicted in Attachment A.

DATED this 13th day of January 2026.
