

Thorneycroft, Kensie

From: richardwist@aol.com
Sent: Friday, May 28, 2021 11:18 AM
To: Thorneycroft, Kensie
Subject: Additional Comments Re: moving boulders

On many claims that are open to dredging, many boulders are present that if not permitted to be moved will halt dredging. On a stream with few or no boulders moving a cubic yard of material is not a problem with the dredge. On other claims with boulders it is impossible to move that same cubic yard of material without using power to move the boulders out of the way. Moving the boulders out of the way that are in that cubic yard of material is not any more or less disruptive than moving the cubic yard of material without boulders. Claims with many boulders should not be discriminated against just because they have larger rocks than other claims with few or no boulders.

Rich Wist